Getting Started With Recovery

And now you are now ready to start your recovery journey.

It's time to reclaim control and gain back your strength and self-love. Recovery isn't just about abstaining from drugs; it's a profound transformation of mind, body, and spirit. It's about breaking free from the chains of addiction and redefining your identity beyond your past struggles and trauma. It's about learning to love and respect yourself again, whilst finding the inner strength to confront challenges head-on.

It could be you meet challenges along the way, but you must stay strong and positive. You can reassure yourself using the hypnotherapy sessions.

But also take a note of these helpful tips you can practice too :

1. Use CBT, like hypnotherapy and guided meditation to ease the mind
2. Surround yourself with loved ones who are empathetic and understanding
3. Avoid seeing people you would associate with when using cocaine.
4. Avoid going to places where you'd use or source the substance
5. Embrace your journey! Give yourself credit for making this good decision
6. Take it step by step, one day to the next. And don't over do it!
7. Reward yourself regularly and celebrate your victory with prizes
8. Accept you'll have bad days and stay resilient.
9. Send yourself thoughts of self-love like "I can do this!"
10. Keep a journal of your thoughts and set yourself daily goals
11. Take up a hobby to distract your mind
12. Learn and practice coping mechanisms like the going to the gym

Remember this is your new beginning and moment for a positive change. You will rediscover what it is like to feel happy again because you are strong and good enough without the need of a substance or drug.

It's time to take the next step listening to the hypnotherapy sessions.

Sit back or lie down – RELAX and hit play!

Let the hypnotherapist's words help you drift off starting you on your journey. Listen to the guided meditations and breathwork session in the morning and the hypnotherapy before going to bed.
